TLC co-op

We are past the half-way point for the fall semester. Hoorah!

October 21, we have no TLC. Barring inclement weather and other unforeseen obstacles, we will finish TLC before Thanksgiving.

It is time to plan for the spring semester. Wouldn't it be nice to know what classes are available for your kids before Christmas? Wouldn't it be nice to start the new year without a last minute scramble to find teachers and classes?

Let's make it happen. Please submit your course description via this google link:

<https://forms.gle/29bdKtzBiv4btZrb6> .

Let me know if you're willing to fill the same volunteer roles for the spring semester.

Thanks!

Comfortable shoes are recommended. If dancing barefoot, make sure to put shoes back on before leaving the sanctuary and especially if going outside during a water break.

From the Coordinators

Autumn is such a glorious time of year. Such beautiful colors are in the trees, the heat and humidity are gone (as well as the bugs), and the time for burning things has come. I always loved heating with wood, and am sitting near my blazing wood stove as I write. I've spent many an hour around our outdoor firepit, and am looking forward to our SCCCHE bonfire this week.

There seems to be something magical about fire. One never gets tired of watching the colorful, dancing flames and the slow transformation of the wood into smoke and ash. Part of our homeschooling includes a video series on chemistry, and one on physics, both done by a wonderful Christian family (Wes Olson, Westfield Studios). In the videos he talks a bit about fire. It's rather hard to explain, since it's not exactly like anything else on the planet. It's not a chemical element, nor is it a physical process or force. As I mentioned earlier, it's rather magical.

Perhaps that's why God used fire to represent the Holy Spirit. While he is a distinct person of the Trinity, he has no physical presence, nor is his role like that of the Father and the Son. In fact, it can be a bit confusing to know when and how he is leading or prompting us. (Personally, I think that sometimes people who say they are being 'led by the Spirit' or 'feeling the Spirit' are confusing that with their own emotions).

But God does not contradict God, and his Spirit will never go against his Word. So it's vital that we Christians know what the word says.

How many times have you opened your Bible this past week? If it's anything less than seven, I highly recommend you make a habit of reading every day.

I have a high school buddy who does a facebook reading group where we do the Bible in a year chronologically or just the NT in 6 months. We've done this for years, and every time we start another round, we get the word out to new people. We start out with over a dozen (or two), and by the end we're down to about 4. Leviticus and the latter prophets are hard to work through!

But stick with it and keep going. As Hank Hannegraff always said - "get into the Word of God and so get the Word of God into you."

God bless!

Josh Peterson
